MARKET COMMENTARY & OUTLOOK
REVIEW:

The U.S. Treasury proved relatively resilient over the quarter, attributable to insulation from the energy price spike as well as a cooling U.S. labor market. In addition, the Fed retained its rate in the first quarter, signaling a wait-and-see policy approach. The benchmark 10-year yield rose to 4.30% by the end of March, up from 4.19% at the start of the year, despite temporarily reaching 4.04% in mid-February. The 2-year yield also moved higher, ending the quarter at 3.79% compared to 3.47% at the close of December 2025.

For Q2 2026, we expect global inflation data, US Fed policy guidance, and oil price trends to shape market direction. However, the renewed disruption in Middle East supply routes will restore volatility and we may see prices trading on headline risk rather than fundamentals.

On the end of the portfolio, we deployed funds in Fixed Income Securities, i.e. Sovereign Eurobonds and Corporate Eurobonds, and took advantage of attractive Eurobond prices as practically as possible. We note that the TER of the fund stood at 0.49%.

We intend to take continued advantage of investments with approved counterparties on favorable terms to enable quick allocation of fresh funds as the Fund continues to grow in subsequent quarters. Overall, we would continue to ensure the competitive return of the Vetiva USD Fixed Income Fund for the benefit of the unitholders.
