MARKET COMMENTARY & OUTLOOK

REVIEW:

The U.S. fixed income market posted modest gains in Q2 2026, weathering both heightened rate volatility and the Fed's ongoing hawkish bias. Yields rose across the Treasury curve, led by the short end, which accelerated the flattening trend as markets priced in sustained monetary tightening.

Oil prices fell nearly 38% sequentially to $72/bbl by end-June, reverting to pre-crisis levels. The drop followed a ceasefire MOU and the reopening of the Strait of Hormuz, which significantly boosted global supply.

In Q3 2026, we expect inflation readings, Fed forward guidance, and crude oil trends to remain the key determinants of market sentiment.

We deployed funds in Fixed Income Securities, i.e. Sovereign Eurobonds and Corporate Eurobonds, and took advantage of attractive Eurobond prices as practically as possible. We note that the TER of the fund stood at 1.07%.

We intend to take continued advantage of investments with approved counterparties on favorable terms to enable quick allocation of fresh funds as the Fund continues to grow in subsequent quarters. Overall, we would continue to ensure the competitive return of the Vetiva USD Fixed Income Fund for the benefit of the unitholders.
